THE

SOUTH-CAROLINA GAZETTE,

Containing the freſheſt Advices, Foreign and Domeſtick.

MONDAY, May 13th, 1745. [Numb. 581.]

The Concluſion of
A View of Foreign Affairs in November laſt; taken from the Gentleman's Magazine for that Month.

THE Approach of the Winter, the Want of Proviſions which were intercepted by the Peaſants, the Fear of ſome Mines which they could not diſcover and by which they hourly excepted to be deſtroyed, and the Loſs which they ſuſtained in the late Battle, have obliged the French and Spaniards, after a Siege of Forty Days, to retire from before the Walls of Coni, and to retreat into Savoy and Dauphiny, perhaps with no leſs Difficulty, and Loſs than they advanced. They now find that the Baron De Leutrum was not unacquainted with his real Strength when upon their Summons to ſurrender Coni, he told them, that he would conſider of their Demand next Year. They have demoliſhed the Fortifications of Demont with ſo much haſte, that Two Hundred of their own Soldiers were deſtroyed by one of the Mines.

Prince Lobkowitz left his Camp at Faille on the 11th of Nov. N.S. and the next Day marching under the Walls of Rome, paſſed the Tiber at Ponte Molle, a Quarter of an Hour before the Forces of the King of Sicily, which being ſuperior by 4100 Men diligently purſued him: The Auſtrians are now quartered at Viterbo.

HOLLAND.

THE Memorial which the Britiſh Miniſter has preſented to the States General, ſince his Anſwer to their Reſolution of not entering into the War with France, conſiſts in what follows. 'That 'though the King his Maſter had reſol-'ved to make no more Repreſentations 'to the Republick, to induce them to 'enter into the War; yet he found him-'ſelf under an indiſpenſable Neceſſity at 'this Juncture particularly, to ſhew their 'High Mightineſſes how difficult it would 'be to keep that amicable Correſpon-'dence between Great Britain and the 'Republick, which is requiſite to ſubſiſt 'between them, if the States General 'perſiſted any longer in ſhewing them-'ſelves indifferent to the Welfare and 'Tranquility of Europe: That however, 'ſince their High Mightineſſes diſcovered 'ſuch invincible Repugnance to take Part 'openly in the preſent War, his Britan-'nick Majeſty deſiſted from exhorting 'them thereto, and only invited them to 'join their Efforts and good Offices with 'his Majeſty, in order to reap Advantage 'from the favourable Diſpoſitions that 'the Court of Savoy, and ſeveral other 'Princes of the Empire, ſhewed in the 'preſent Conjuncture.' This Declaration of his Britannick Majeſty being conformable to what the Republick itſelf propoſed, Mr Trevor was thereupon invited to two Conferences held at the Grand Penſionary's Houſe, at which alſo aſſiſted ſome of the principal Members of the State, when the following Anſwer was made to Mr. Trevor. 'That the States 'General perceived with the utmoſt 'Satisfaction, that his Britannick Ma-'jeſty did not entirely diſapprove of the 'Conduct which they were obliged to 'purſue, and ſhould be always extreamly 'delighted with ſhewing their hearty 'Zeal for promoting the Intereſt of the 'Common Cauſe. That their High 'Mightineſſes not being able, for the 'Reaſons they had heretofore alledged, 'to engage themſelves in a general War, 'his Britannick Majeſty might be aſſured, 'that in every other Reſpect they would 'uſe their utmoſt Efforts, to keep and 'improve the Princes and States that 'were favourably inclined towards her 'Majeſty of Hungary in their good Diſ-'poſitions. That it was for this End 'they had appointed Mr. Calkoen to re-'pair on their Part to the Court of 'Dreſden, where they would, with the 'greateſt Pleaſure, ſupport all the Pro-'poſitions which ſhould be made there, 'in order to determine that Court to em-'ploy all its Forces in Favour of her 'Majeſty of Hungary.' Mr. Trevor re-'preſented, 'That his Britannick Majeſty 'ſaw with great Satisfaction, that the Re-'publick took part in the Treaty con-'cluded between Great Britain and his 'Poliſh Majeſty, Elector of Saxony, and 'that it had agreed to furniſh a Third 'part of the Subſidy promiſed that 'Prince.

FRANCE.

It has been hitherto a Matter of Diſpute, whether the Dutcheſs of Chateauroux would be ſent for again to Court, or not. It having been affirm'd, that ſhe had retired to the Royal Abbey of Poiſſy, either at her own Option, or the King's Command, but it is at length put out of all Doubt, M. Maurepas having, by expreſs Order of the King, been with that Lady, and declared to her, 'That his Majeſty had charged him to tell her, that he was very ſorry for the indecent Treatment ſhe had met with at Metz, and that he deſired her and the Dutcheſs her Siſter to take their Poſts again, and to continue their Friendſhip towards him; in ſhort, that the greateſt Mark they could give him of their Affection, would be to return to Court, where he ſhould be delighted to give them Marks of his Protection, Bounty, and Friendſhip." The ſame Compliments were likewiſe made to the Dutcheſs of Lauragais. It is ſaid they each of them anſwered, "That their Reſpect for his Majeſty for his Majeſty did not permit them to diſobey his Commands, of whoſe Goodneſs they could not doubt, though their Enemies had greatly injured them, by taking Advantage of the dangerous State his Majeſty was in at Metz, to deſtroy his good Opinion of them, whereas they could not reproach themſelves with having in the leaſt been wanting in their Duty toward him." The Duke de Lauragais, Husband to the latter of theſe Ladies, has been greatly benefitted by this Change, the King having appointed him his Ambaſſador Extraordinary to Spain, to demand the Infanta for the Dauphin, and to conduct her into France. The Return of theſe Ladies, which we predicted at the Cloſe of our Auguſt Book, cannot fail occaſioning ſeveral conſiderable Changes at Court.

Mr. Timothy,

PLEASE to inſert the following Lines in your next, which I lately met with in an old Pamphlet; in doing which you'll much oblige

Your moſt humble Servant. A. E.

A WORLD that's full of Fools and Madmen,
Of over glad, and over ſad Men,
With a few good, but many bad Men.

So many Cheats, and cloſe Diſguiſes,
So many down, for one that riſes,
So many Fops, for one that wiſe is.

So many Women, ugly, fine,
Their Inſide foul, their Outſide ſhines;
So many Preachers, few Divines.

So many of religious Sect,
Who quite do miſexpound the Text,
About they know not what perplext.

Many Diſeaſes that do fill ye,
Many Deaths that do kill ye,
Few Phyſicians that do heal ye.

Many Lawyers that undo ye,
But few Friends that will ſtick to ye,
And other Ills that do purſue ye.

So many Tradeſmen Liars,
So many cheated Buyers,
As even Numeration tires. S.

So many looſe Ones, and high flying,
Who live as if there were no dying,
Heav'n and Hell, and all defying.

So many under ſcanty Rates,
Who yet do live at lofty Rates,
And make a Shew of great Eſtates.

And if they will not take Offence,
Many great Men of little Senſe,
Who yet to Politicks make Pretence.

Many meriting lower Fate,
Have Title, Office, and Eſtate,
Their Betters waiting at their Gate.

The worthleſs meet with high'r Advances,
As the wiſe Beſtower fancies;
To the worthy nothing chances.

The worthy and the worthleſs Train,
Modeſt, ſilent, nothing gain;
Impudent, begging, all obtain.

A World wherein is plenteous Store
Of foppiſh Rich, ingenious Poor,
Neglected, forc'd to beg from Door to Door.

A World compos'd, 'tis ſtrange to tell!
Of forming Paradiſe, real Hell,
Yet all agree to love't too well.

Where Knave, Fool, the Fool, the wiſe,
The one like to the other dies,
And leaves a World of vanities.

Proud and covetous, Beaus and Bullies:
Like one o'your muſing Melancholies,
I cry for all their Ills, and laugh at all their Follies.
